of the infringement and its impact on consumer satisfaction. We offer ourselves to assess the 8 level of perceived risk of counterfeit medicines among consumers. Indeed, this study was 9 conducted on the basis of a questionnaire to a sample of 250 people. We had a dependent 10 variable frequency of purchase. Purchase frequency was explained by the perceived risk factor 11 initially been apprehensive; this factor comprising a number of variables all inspired by the 12 literature review. Drawing on the methodology of Mallet (2004), we conducted an analysis at 13 two levels, namely descriptive and explanatory. Descriptive analysis showed that the variable 14 that best assess the risk is felt Risk incurred. Estimating a multinomial logistic regression, it 15 appears that users do not perceive significant risks associated with the use of counterfeit 16 drugs. In addition, the perception of risk is not sufficient to explain the frequency of purchase 17 of counterfeit medicines. It would be possible for organizations that protect the rights of 18 consumers to focus on the risks to alert consumers to significantly reduce the purchase and the 19 consequences associated with the use of counterfeit drugs1. 20

²³ 1 Introduction

a) Background of the study ecruitment or placement is regarded as the foremost part of any organization. It 24 is regarded as the most important policy in management of human resource in an organization, and this is 25 because without it, an organization exists in void. According to ICSC Secretariat (August 2001), every other 26 recruitment should not only be based on some shared principles, but also should conform to internationally 27 accepted practices. Any recruitment exercise should be devoid of corruption, nepotism or favouritism. A report 28 prepared by Transparency International in the year 2009, dubbed the Corruption Perceptions Index (CPI), 29 ranked Kenya Arguably, the initiation part of corruption and indiscipline in the Kenyan police service starts at 30 the recruitment or selection stage. As would be discussed in this paper, over the years, every other recruitment 31 process is riddled with bribery, nepotism and favouritism. This paper has linked rampant bribery and other 32 unethical practices during police recruitments in Kenva over the last four years to high level of insecurity in the 33 country. Through use of case studies, focus group discussions, interviews and observations, unethical practices is 34 the root cause of insecurity. 35

³⁶ 2 b) Statement of the problem

Over the years, Kenya police has been attributed to all manner of negative assertions. In the year 2007, the police service was heavily accused for illegal executions of persons and group of persons perceived to be disturbing normalcy in the country. Specifically, the police was accused with extra-judicial killings of the Mungiki sect members in Nairobi and its environs. Such acts and many others preceding and afterwards has given local and international observers conclude that there is a lot of rot in the police force. Recently, the terrorism menace has

42 increased, and so are runaway insecurity, conspired thefts, undemocratic disruptions of lawful demonstrations

43 and picketing, and highly acclaimed corruption in the police force. In this regard therefore, the paper answers 44 the questions; does the rot and incompetence of the police service in Kenya stem from unethical practice during as one of the nations in the world which is most corrupt ??Ndegwa, November 19, 2009).

Overall, Kenya was given a score of 2.2, meaning that the perception on corruption, and especially bribery was very. In regard to institutions, the police service in Kenya has over the years led as an institution most corrupt, not only in Kenya, but the whole of East Africa. According to Herbling (September 2, 2012), the police department in Kenya was the most corrupt institution in the whole of East Africa in the year 2012. Other than corruption, the police force in Kenya has been attributed shadowy deals such as protecting drug lords, illegal 54 execution of prominent individuals and partaking in thefts in Kenya.

55 4 c) Research hypothesis

In any organization in the world, staffing remains the single most important step of improving performance of 56 an organization. In essence therefore, if a recruitment exercise is bungled, wrong people would be put into the 57 organization, and such would be a starting point of a downward trend in terms of performance. The rot in the 58 police service in Kenya can be attributed to the recruitment exercises; whereby, majority of those who make it 59 60 to the police force pay their way in. In this regard therefore; Unethical practices during national recruitment 61 exercises of police force in Kenya has led to low performance of the service. d) Research objectives 1. To 62 investigate the link between high levels of conspired thefts and low morale of the police force in Kenya. 2. To 63 find out whether increased insecurity trends in the country is attributable to incompetence and unwillingness to stem it out. 3. To evaluate the trends in the recruitment exercises in Kenya and whether they are riddled with 64 nepotism, bribery, tribalism and favouritism. 4. To link incompetence and poor performance in the police service 65 to presence of individuals who do not have the passion to be in the service other than monetary gains. 66

e) Research questions 1. What are the attributes of the police service in Kenya in terms of their capabilities to stem out runaway insecurity, increased presence of outlawed groups and terrorism? 2. How is the police service in Kenya rated in terms of bribery during recruitment services and general performance? 3. How rampant is corruption or lack of it in the police force, and more so during the selection and recruitment of security personnel in Kenya. 4. What are some of the unethical tendencies that are attributable to recruitment of the police service in Kenya? 5. What links exist in the police service in Kenya in regard to incompetence of security personnel in Kenya and claims of unethical practices during national recruitment exercises of police service in Kenya?

f) Assumption of the study This research is based on assumption that the tendencies of unethical practices that were noted in the selected case studies and reference points were representative of a wider trend in Kenya. The study also makes assumption that the selected respondents were not biased in the answers they gave, and that their views were representative of the whole of the professions they represented.

g) The scope of the study This study was limited to the police service in Kenya. The focus was on the recruitment of police into the police service in Kenya in the year 2014. The outcome is linked to the rampant rise of insecurity in Kenya for the past four years. Reports from various local and international sources have been used in this study to qualify the relationships between ethical or unethical practice during recruitments of police officers in Kenya and the performance, or lack of it for police service for the past four years.

⁸³ 5 h) Ethical consideration of the study

There are a number of ethical considerations that were made in this study so as to come up with a most representative analysis of the police in Kenya, and the link of poor performance to unethical practices during recruitment drives.

1. The policing profession is a most sensitive profession, and thus a lot of information gathered in the course of this study could not be included in this study.

⁸⁹ 6 Enough authority from relevant policing institution had to be consulted during the whole of the study. 3. As a matter of necessity, the results of this study had to be shared with relevant heads of various policing institutions in Kenya, and their views of whether to publish were sought.

⁹⁴ 8 Literature Review a) Introduction to Theoretical framework

The focus of this paper is the strong links that exists between poor strategies in recruitment of people into an organization and resultant poor performance. Organizations all over the world take enough time in strategizing 97 on how to get the right people in their organizations. This is because haphazard recruitment can result to 98 having incompetent staffs and having people whose interest is not embedded on improving the performance of an 99 organization. In this regard therefore, it is paramount to put measures and principles that are to be used during 100 any recruitment exercise.

Specifically, this paper looks at how, Kenyan police service has over the years lost its glory in terms of performance, simply because their recruitment exercises are riddled with unethical practices such as bribery, nepotism, favouritism and tribalism. The literature review analyzes both theoretical and conceptual frameworks as a way of finding the strong link between performance of an organization, and recruitment exercises.

¹⁰⁵ 9 b) Theoretical framework i. Introduction to theoretical ¹⁰⁶ framework

As underlined in this project, the focus is on the underlying relationships between poor performance of police in Kenya and the unethical practices that are studied to cause rising trends of insecurity and general poor performance of the police service in Kenya. This section looks at some of the core theories that help create this link. The following theories have been evaluated to create this link, namely; the retention theory, the attribution theory, implicit personality theory, the objective factor theory, the critical contact theory, and the subjective factor theory.

ii. Retention theory This theory is most applicable in an organization setting, and concerns itself with the 113 ability to hold employees in an organization. This is a most critical part of any organization; because, the 114 ability to retain qualified employees in the organization makes the organization attain stability. According to 115 Larson, Lakin and Bruiniks (1998), a well strategized recruitment process helps in building a good foundation of 116 a company in terms of performance. More so, this is because the recruitment process will yield a good work base, 117 which is highly talented and passionate about the working of the organization. Logan (2007) has also studied on 118 how good management of Human Resource can help in attaining good retention of workforce, with the starting 119 point of management being at the recruitment stage. 120

As expounded and understanding of this theory, it is clear that failure to strategize during recruitment can yield a bad workforce. Retention is mostly through good absorption, and if this is not capitalized during recruitment, stability of the company would be compromised. Logan (2007) puts it that Human Resource management starts at the recruitment point. If such an exercise is bungled, a company would be full of non-talented persons and those not passionate about what they are assigned to do. It is highly important to set good standards during the recruitment drive so as to have a workforce committed to the ideals and values of the organization, and for good retention capacity.

iii. Attribution theory This theory helps in attaching some meaning to the behavior of other people, or even how people think. In explaining how people behave, internal attributions have to be evaluated, especially in personality traits. An environment or a situation can give a person a particular trait, which overall can give someone a defined attribution. According to Anderson (2001), an interviewee during recruitment must be evaluated on the kind of behavior he or she has. In this regard, if a bad behavior is recruited into the workforce, it means that the stability of the company and general performance are compromised.

Attribution theory is highly applicable in explaining low performance of the police service in Kenya. 134 Attributions of individuals recruited into the police service can be driven either by motivation or by emotions. 135 Mostly, it is recommended that individuals absorbed into the police force are driven by motivation as opposed 136 to emotions. Emotional driven attributions can encompass a need to make quick money, or a need for revenge. 137 Such individuals would only lower performance of the police service as opposed to adding value. Corruption 138 and other unethical deals during recruitment helps have such kind of attributions into the police, and as such 139 should be avoided. iv. Implicit Personality theory Implicit Personality theory helps in defining biases and specific 140 patterns that individual acquires when making a decision or an impression about something with low information 141 on it. This theory was developed by Renato Tagiuri and Jerome Bruner in the 1950s when they considered some 142 external impressions or traits developed by individuals (Cash, 2013). It is all about stereotypes that individuals 143 develop towards something, and therefore, if a person with negative stereotypes towards an institution is recruited 144 into an organization, such an individual can only lower performance of the organization as opposed to adding 145 value to it. It is critical that when an organization is carrying out a selection and recruitment drive, factors such 146 as passion to perform should be considered. Those whose main aims are material gains instead of contributing 147 to value addition should be discarded at the recruitment stage. 148

All selection and recruitment methods should have utility and validity (London, 2001). It is important to be choosy during recruitment, with the criteria being on those whose ability to add value is high. However, when ethics are not considered, possibilities that are that individuals put into the workforce are limited in terms of ability to add value. Such should be the case whenever there is a recruitment drive of the police service. In most cases, with an example of the Kenyan police recruitment drives, acts of terrorism become rampant, and it is hard to determine whether those who have been put into the police service are capable of delivering and securing people.

¹⁵⁶ 10 v. Objective factor theory

Objectivity is an important consideration in any decision making process. By definition, objectivity means considering all sides of prevailing situations before coming up with an informed decision. As well, before an individual decides to work for a particular organization, he or she must have evaluated all possibilities and need of working for the organization. According to Christians (2012), most of the factors that are chosen by individuals wishing to work in an organization include the location, the levels of salaries or wages, the nature of work and opportunities present for growth. The theory suggests that individuals apply for a Year 2014 () job mostly based on the attributes of the organization and the tangibility of the job (Christians, 2012). However, the issue of money has always come in, and a number of individuals would do anything to be in the organization.

166 Such a situation is highly prevalent during police service recruitment drives, where, individual would consider 167 bribery as a way of getting the job.

¹⁶⁸ 12 vi. Subjective factor theory

As opposed to the objective factor theory, the subjective factor theory looks at the personality and the 169 compatibility of a person with the image an organization is known for. It is also a very critical factor to be 170 considered when choosing the company to work for. Wilson (2008) is of the view that an individual should first 171 of all evaluate whether the company or institution he or she is wishing to join has the attributes he or she possess. 172 For example, in the police force, not everybody has a sense of responsibility in securing people, and such people 173 should not be allowed to be in the organization. However, in most cases, the people who are recruited are those 174 who have 'bought' their way in, through favouritism, tribalism or bribery. Such a sad situation only begets low 175 performance of the police force. In Kenya, over the years, rampant insecurity tendencies have been reported, and 176 not that the police service does not have enough resources, but individuals in this force lack compatibility with 177 178 the service.

¹⁷⁹ 13 vii. Critical contact theory

This theory is relevant where the objective and subjective factors theories are not applicable. A person may lack 180 information about a particular company. This theory asserts that an individual may lack critical differentiates 181 of a various job opportunities prevalent and does not have significant contact with a company. Employment 182 of such a person is mostly based on his or her presentation during the interview. Basing on the argument of 183 non-performance in an organization, an individual who fails to understand what is needed in a job may fail to 184 have significant contribution to it. As per the discussion, an individual may lack requisite knowledge about what 185 is needed for a person getting into the police service in Kenya. Such an individual, even after intense training will 186 still not add value to the service. Such individuals should be filtered right at the recruitment stage. The concept 187 of Ethical competency is the ability to identify an ethical problem and commit one to resolving it. Problem 188 solving and reasoning are most critical in this concept. Ethical competency involves a lot of components, and 189 which ought to be adhered to by recruiting individuals and those being recruited. First, he or she must have 190 the competency of evaluation and fact gathering, where, there must be competency to collect as well as examine 191 some relevant facts about a decision to be made (Watson, March 2013). Secondly, the individuals must have 192 creative alternatives to solve underlying problems as well as make creative decisions. Thirdly, the individuals 193 must be able to foresee some of the potential consequences that can result when some decisions are made, and 194 as such, offer remedies before the consequences are realized. 195

196 Ndambuki

¹⁹⁷ 14 ix. Commitmentself efficacy, education

There is a strong link between good systems of high level performance practices at work places and the 198 organizational performance. When the performance of practices is high, the resultant is a high performing 199 organization (Huselid, 1995). High level performance of individuals takes commitment; and such is comprised 200 with high level self efficacy and education. A well educated work force, and which has self efficacy means that the 201 performance is high, and so is the performance of the organization. in essence, education and self efficacy are two 202 components that have to be considered when recruiting individuals into the organization. Failure to do so means 203 that the organization would be riddled with individuals who fail to comply with the values of the organization, 204 hence low performance. 205

Commitment during recruitment drives has to be evaluated. The levels of self determination of individuals being recruited, and their education are utmost relevant for an organization. There are levels of education that are set for each and every other organization, whether private or public, and for a police force in Kenya, the standard is a specific KCSE grade. Other than the grade, it is utmost important to evaluate the preparedness of the individuals to undertake the hard tasks that characterize the police service, such as securing the livelihoods of Kenyans as they go about their work. Any recruitment exercise should be devoid of other considerations other than the preparedness and education of the individuals. 213 x. Year 2012

The month of January 2012 saw the killing of a member of the Community Peace and Security Team, based in Hagadera camp. The attack also claimed a number of police officers. On March 10, 2012, six people were killed, while more than 60 got injured when a grenade was hurled at people in the Machakos bus station.

On 29 th April 2012, God's House of Miracles Church, based at Ngara Estate was attacked, where one person died and more than 10 injured. On Tuesday 15 th May 2012, three grenades at thrown at Bella Vista club in Mombasa, killing one person and injure five. The militant also indiscriminately fired at people, killing one woman and injuring two night guards.

May 28, 2012 saw a blast go off within Assanand's House along Moi Avenue, injuring more than 25 people. Sunday 24 th June 2012 had a grenade attack at a Jericho Beer Garden located in Mishomoroni Mombasa County, killing 3 people and more than 30 injured. July 1 st 2012 had masked gunmen attacking two churches in Garissa killing 17 people and injuring more than 50; while one person was killed on 3 rd August 2012 and six others injured in Eastleigh.

On 30 th September 2012, a boy aged 9 years was killed by a grenade in a Sunday school along Juja road. Ten people were killed on November 18 2012 and 25 injured in Eastleigh, and on Wednesday 5 th December, one person was killed in Joska area, Eastleigh.

xi. Year 2013 Amongst other security lapse incidences, the year saw the most tragic terrorism incidence when 229 masked Al-Shabab gunmen stormed a popular shopping mall in Nairobi, the Westgate mall, killing more than 65 230 231 people, and injuring hundreds of people. This 21 st September 2013 incidence is quoted as a major one, because 232 it attacked a major area harbouring affluent people in the society, including foreigners. There were a number 233 of other terrorist incidences therefore after; for example, on 13 th December 2013, double blasts were reported in Wajir, a town on the North Eastern side of Kenya. The following day, a hand grenade was thrown towards 234 a minibus in Eastleigh, where four people were killed and 36 others injured. The report is a research project 235 that was submitted by Lieutenant Daniel Allen of the Detroit Police Department in March 2007. The research 236 report identified a number of flaws that are prevalent during hiring or recruitment practices in the cities put 237 under research, namely; Detroit, Los Angeles, Cleveland, Chicago, New Orleans and Miami. The report qualifies 238 a popular assertion that police are always vulnerable to corruption and mostly applicable during recruitment of 239 the police personnel. 240

Mediocrity of the police force in the cities under study is seen to emanate from the recruitment process. When a police officer is recruited using dubious means, there will ever be temptations to engage in some corrupt deals in the course of working. Such practices mentor police personnel that it is okay to engage in corruption and other forms of unethical practice, and such can lower the performance of the police service. To end the trend, the chain has to be cut at the recruitment process. The recruiting individuals should not demand to be bribed by the new recruits as such a situation would corrupt the minds of the recruits.

ii. Baragoi: Failing Internal and External Accountability -Report The report dubbed, Document -Kenya: 247 Police Reform in Kenya: "A Drop in the Ocean, published by Amnesty International evaluates a number of 248 situations where the police service in Kenva has failed. More significant is the analysis of how failure to have 249 internal and external accountability led to Baragoi killings of police trainees. The killings happened on November 250 10, 2012, and in that fateful day, Kenya woke up to news that more than forty (40) police officers lost their 251 lives in Baragoi forest. This forest is surrounded by an arid area, mostly inhabited by Turkana and Samburu 252 ethnic communities. The analysis of these killings pointed to a failure of lack of both external and internal 253 accountabilities of the police force. 254

As put in the report, a number of reforms have been neglected in the police force, to an extent that there was no clear command system before the more than 40 newly recruited individuals were sent to face hardened bandits. The pointer is lack of accountability and a rot in the whole system of the police force. Up to the present day, those responsible of sending newly trained personnel to the forest, instead of experienced police have not been held accountability. It is a pointer of the depth corruption in the police service has gone.

the Kenya Police Airwing to overall some four Russian helicopters by a colossal amount of Ksh. 840 million. By any standard, such an amount is huge considering the helicopters were in operation for 9 years; from 1998 to 2007. Mars Group Kenya took upon itself to notify Kenyans of what the police service in Kenya is squandering money. The money is contributed by Kenyans, and so it should be used for the purposes it is intended. Such levels of corruption exist in the police service, and unless there are prudent measures to curb this, Kenya will continue losing millions and millions of taxpayers' money.

The report is critical of how corrupt the police service in Kenya is. Looking at the figures quoted to replace the four Russian helicopters, it is easy to understand why the police service in Kenya is said to be the most corrupt in the whole of East Africa. In essence, corruption starts at the recruitment stage, where, those being recruited are put through some unethical deals such as bribery, tribalism and nepotism among other negative vices. Possibly, all police departments in Kenya are corrupt. This begs the answer; where does the vice start showing its head? It can only be at the recruitment stage.

iv. EACC Report: Corruption and Unethical Practices in Countrywide Recruitment of Police Officers

This report was prepared by the Ethics and Anti-Corruption Commission (EACC) and investigated various situations where corruption prevails during police recruitments in Kenya. The report looks a number of cases where individuals are exposed to corruption during recruitment of police officers. In virtually all situations, there are corruption tendencies, and the respondents give situations where they think that unethical tendencies are applied during recruitment. Overall, this report notes that unethical behaviours have social, economic, cultural and political effects. When corruption is practiced at the recruitment stage, the ripples effect is that the officers will carry on with the tendencies to their work places.

In one of the case studies, Chotara, a foreign student is conducting a research on corruption tendencies in the 281 282 Kenyan military as well as the capacity of the military to carry out its duties effectively. He seeks information 283 from Kerich Maarufu, one of the public officers stationed at the department, who attends to his requests. Chotara 284 is not surprised that Kerich wants him to bribe him so that he can attended to. The astonishment is that the nature of information Chotara This case study looks at experts' evaluation of increased terrorism in Kenya and 285 the link with the rot in the police force. According to Odula (May 29, 2014), there is a strong link between the 286 deadly terrorist attacks that have happened over the years in Kenya and the deep rooted corruption in the police 287 force systems. Odula (May 29, 2014) notes that the system graft is at the core of the inability of the state to 288 respond to the terrorist attack and insecurity in general. John Githongo, one of the experts who gave their views 289 in this report point to a well coordinated corruption network that is hard to break, unless there is commitment 290 and will to cut the chain. As analyzed by Githongo, the country is paying heavily the price of corruption with 291 the 'blood.' Terrorism acts in Kenya can be attributed to the rot prevalent in the police force, which starts at 292 the recruitment stage. Indeed, if corruption is not started right at the initiation stage, police officers would not 293 have guts to ask for bribes from terrorist and other criminals. Corruption in Kenyan police service is deeply 294 295 embedded, and did not start a decade ago (Odula, May 29, 2014). The rot in national security started during precolonial era. Even then, police officers who were recruited by the colonial masters would ask for bribe or 296 partner in crime for a fee. The ruling elite in the country are much aware of what happens in the police force, 297 but are unwilling and not committed it. As put by Githongo in Odula (May 29, 2014), Kenya will continue to 298 suffer from terrorism unless the mindsets of police officers are changed right at the start. 299

³⁰⁰ 16 vi. Kenya: Police Abuse Nairobi's Refugees -Human Rights Watch Report Human Rights Watch (May 29, 2013) This report was prepared by the International Human 301 Rights Watch Organization and highlights the depth of human rights abuse amongst police to the Nairobi's 302 refugees. Refugees in Nairobi, who are under the watch of International organizations, have been subjected to 303 torture and abuse by police officers, who are supposed to guard them. The Kenyan authority has failed to open 304 investigations into the abuses. This is a pointer that the Kenvan authority collaborates in what happens in the 305 refugees' stations. Unbelievably, the police officers engaging in such acts do not feel remorse, and unleash terror 306 on the refugees. The refugees in Kenya have ever remained under uncertainties on whether they can be relocated 307 to other countries. More so, the torture they are subjected to is making them lose faith in Kenyan environment 308 as a safe haven for their stay. 309

The abuse of refugees in Kenya, and especially Kenyan capital, Nairobi does not only involve beating up. 310 Refugees, especially those who have come from the war torn Somalia are asked for money for their protection. 311 Their wealth is stolen by the police manning them in areas such as Eastleigh area in Nairobi. At times, hundreds 312 313 of police officers would descend on areas housing refugees and subject them to torture such as rape, beating, extortion and stealing. vii. Kenya immigration, Police take bribes, Vulnerable to terrorism: Guul Group report 314 The Guul Group (May 29, 2014) produced a report that analyzes corruption at the Kenyan immigration 315 points, the vulnerability of the country to terrorism and the tendency of police in Kenya to always taken bribes. 316 A police officer in Kenya is willing to break ethics of the police service just to take a bribe. Such a bribe can 317 result to huge damages such as building being brought down by terrorism. A terrorist is all aware of how corrupt 318 the police officers in Kenya are corrupt, and thus can easily sneak a grenade into a building and blow it up. As 319 put by Guul Group (May 29, 2014), Kenya may continue to see a string of terrorist attacks simply because there 320 is unwillingness to end corruption in the system. 321

Al-Shabab continues to be blamed for terrorist attacks in Kenya. The terrorist group is dominant Somalia, but has found a good playing ground in Kenya. Despite having immigration points on the boarders of Kenya, these terrorists still find their way into the capital city of the country. An immigration officer; probably because of how he or she was introduced during his or her hiring is willing to take a bribe from a suspected Al-Shabab individual so that the terrorist can sneak the bombs into the country. This level of corruption will continue to ruin Kenya if stringent measures are not undertaken. The rot in the police force can only be eliminated when individuals are being recruited.

was seeking did not require much commitment, but instead, he is required to 'give something' in exchange a unique set of recruitment, but which makes the police force in New Jersey worth emulating. Every other employment in the New Jersey police service as a trooper must have compressive requirements, categorized under background information. Critical in these are; high levels of integrity, high levels of responsibilities, sound moral character, high level of dependability, reliability and be of sound judgment. These values are known when a person is taken through a number of interview steps. Recruiting individuals know too well that failure to look into these critical requirements would make the police service in New Jersey be riddled with corrupt individuals. The measures put in this police department are worth emulating. They can help stem out corruption and unethical practices.

³³⁸ 18 ix. Tackling Police Corruption in Kenya -IWPR Report

This report was compiled by the Institute for War and Peace Reporting (IWPR). As written by Wanjala (August 6, 2013), the way to end corruption amongst police officers in Kenya is to have tighter discipline, better payment and instilling greater accountability. The report notes that corruption has double sides; those engaged and those engaged into. For example, a driver in Kenya roads knows too well that traffic police officers takes bribes, and thus such a mind has been inculcated into his or her mind, and is willing to give money to the police officer.

If corruption is to be terminated completely, Kenyan authorities must be willing and committed to fight it. If there can be greater accountability, police officers would fear to engage in corruption. If there could be stringent measures during recruitment, the recruited individuals would not get a mind that they can earn easy money when they start their work. It would take courage to ask for a bribe, hence improving commitment to work diligently. The resultant would be a high performing police force in Kenya. Various public and private organizations can combine efforts to fight the vice until it is completely stemmed out. It is the only way to put Kenya back to stability.

³⁵² 20 Methodology a) Introduction to Methodology

This study was done to assess the relationship between corruption experienced during recruitment of police officers, and the overall neglect this institution has practiced in its core mandate of protecting people. In order to come up with a quality analysis, only qualitative approaches were done; as opposed to combining both quantitative and qualitative approaches. The respondents in this research were successful and unsuccessful recruits during the 2014 police recruitment drive, and selected experts. Case studies were used to qualify the relationship, while interviews, focus group discussions and observatio ns were used to get quality information from concerned individuals.

³⁶⁰ 21 b) Research design

This research project utilized descriptive research design, with a specific focus of qualitative approach. In this study, case studies, interviews, focus group discussions, and naturalistic observations were utilized. This approach was most favoured as it gave the researcher a clear direction to investigate the relationships of the variables. In this regard, the researcher was able to go to the field and take notes, as well as engage interested parties to discuss underlying issues of police recruitments and how unethical behaviours during the exercises are resulting to rampant insecurity in the country.

A number of case studies were selected, and which helped in qualifying the data collected on the field, through, interviews, quality focus group discussions, and observations among others. The case studies used concern high levels of corruption in Kenya, and how the trends in unethical behaviours stem from the starting stage of hiring/recruitment of police officers into police service.

³⁷¹ 22 c) Research sampling

Selective sampling method was chosen to get stations as places of studies during the recruitment exercise of 2014. These stations were; Kamukunji in Nairobi City County, Baricho in Kirinyaga County and Nakuru town in Nakuru County. It was important to use selective method of sampling in this study as it helped in getting maximum results. For example, in Nairobi and Nakuru Counties, the fact that the areas are cosmopolitans was critical in getting diverse views regarding the overall process. On the other hand, Kirinyaga County is in the rural areas of Kenya, hence, the expectations were that the researcher would get uniform data or information regarding corruption, or lack of it during the recruitment drive.

³⁷⁹ 23 d) Methods of data collection

This research project utilized a number of methods of data collection. The chosen methods were found to be most suited, considering that the research design used is qualitative one. The methods of data collection in this research study included; focus group discussions, key informant interviews, participant observations, and case studies.

e) Methods of data analysis $\mathbf{24}$ 384

In this research study, qualitative data analysis was used as a way of making significant meanings to the 385 relationship of corruption during recruitment drives of police officers in Kenya, and resultant corruption and 386 inefficiencies at work places. More specifically, this research employed the open and selective processes of 387 qualitative data analysis. These methods were found to be important to this particular study as information 388 Particularly, the analysis of data involved the researcher asking himself questions relating to collected information, 389 making critical comparisons and then looking for differences and similarities present in the information gathered. 390

Results and Analysis of Data a) 392

Data from Interviews i. Credibility of police recruitment exercises in Kenya From the graph above, it is clear 393 that preferences of the nature of police recruitments in Kenya vary. Specifically, it can be seen that politicians 394 and the police officers do not see much of lack of credibility in the recruitment exercises that are done in Kenya. 395 However, as can be seen from the responses of human rights persons and EACC officers, there is little credibility 396 of police recruitment in Kenya. Going by the division in opinion from the interviews, it is clear that it is hard to 397 deduce whether there is credibility or not. However, it is easy to separate the mind sets of those approving police 398 399 recruitments in Kenya and those who do not. Essentially, the police officers and politicians are likely to favour 400 the recruitments, but the human rights persons and EACC officers, whose opinions can be widely accepted, do 401 not see much of credibility in any of the recruitment processes in Kenya. ii. Link between unethical behaviour during recruitment of police officers and the rot in the police force Just as analyzed above about the credibility 402 of the recruitment exercises of hiring police officers in Kenya, the same opinions were replicated when they were 403 asked on whether there is a link between the unethical behaviors witnessed during recruitment drives and low 404 performance in the police force. While the human rights defenders and EACC officers noted of a link, the police 405 officers and the politicians saw little link A group of 5 individuals, 2 males and 3 females were picked by the 406 researcher after the 2014 contested recruitment drive to discuss the outcomes of the exercise. From the discussion, 407 it was clear that the exercise was mauled by corruption tendencies, and the police officers were not shy to ask 408 as high as Ksh. 150,000. The discussion also touched on the levels of tribalism that was prevalent, and mostly 409 in Nairobi. It mattered who were in charge of the exercises, where, most of those picked were from the tribe 410 of the police officer. It was clear that nepotism was practiced, and to some, the exercise was just for formality 411 purposes. Instead, the names were picked even before the exercise started. 412 ii.

The respondents in this method of collecting information were in agreement that what was exercised during the 414 recruitment drive of the police was the reason behind low performance of the police officers in Kenya. Essentially, 415 the participants noted that corruption at the immigration department as well as various police stations in Kenya 416 was to blame for rampant terrorist attacks. The group wondered how a person can go ahead to commit a crime 417 just few metres from a police station. The group noted that if the trend is not cut in earnest, it would be hard 418 to fight crime in this country. Those who are being recruited into the police force are shown in those early stages 419 what the police force is commonly known for; corruption. If an individual can agree to pay as much as Ksh. 420 150,000 to get recruited, little can deter him or her from asking for a bribe from a criminal. The trend has to be 421 ended, and it has to be now. 422

c) Data from Observations 26 423

The researchers were stationed in three major areas of recruitment; Kamukunji in Nairobi County, Nakuru town 424 in Nakuru County and Baricho in Kirinyaga County. The researchers were able to pick a number of observations, 425 which qualified the assertions that the rot in the police force in Kenya stems right from the first stage of having 426 individuals into the police force. In Nairobi for example, very many youths were turned away, despite appearing 427 to qualify on all areas. It was not very clear what extra the recruiting police officers were checking other than 428 external features, academic qualifications and medical requirements. who did not even participate in the race, 429 and were qualified to the last stage before final picking. The favouritism was widespread and not limited to the 430 three counties under study. d) Data from case studies/reports i. 431

As reported by Citizen TV on July 19, 2014, the Kenyan investigative body, EACC came with a report 432 that summarized the police recruitment drive as characterized by corruption and other unethical behaviours. 433 The commission noted that it had credible evidence showing that the police recruitment was highly marred 434 by corruption, and thus recommended that the National Police Service nullify the entire process. It also 435 recommended that those responsible be held accountable. 436 ii.

438 The Standard Newspaper of November 13th 2013 as written by Geoffrey Mosoku noted that Uasin Gishu 439 County topped as the most corrupt regional government in the year 2013. This information was contained in 440 a report on national Survey on Corruption and Ethics 2012. Other counties in the top list included Embu, Samburu, Nairobi, Meru, Nyamira, Tharaka-Nithi, Narok and Mombasa. Those counties least with corruption 441 incidences were Baringo, Marsabit, Taita, Busia, Turkana, Vihiga, West Pokot, Isiolo, Siaya and Taita Taveta. 442 In Baringo alone, the average bribe is Ksh. 20,075, Kirinyaga Ksh 15,914 while Nakuru is Ksh 8,466. This is a 443 clear show of how corruption in the police departments across the country is prone to corruption. The creation of counties was meant to devolve development to regional areas; however, this has been seen to even devolve commuting acrossible areas radius departments.

446 corruption especially amongst police departments.

September 2013 was a tough month for Kenyans as the country realized how terrorism can cripple the economy 448 of a county. However, what did not come to into light for many Kenyans is how corruption and ineptitude led to 449 the attack. According to the report produced by the National Assembly of Kenya, the investigating arm of the 450 government had warned of an impending attack, but the information was not acted upon. The highest probability 451 is that somebody at the top of command did not want to act on the information; with the results being the 21st 452 September 2013 Westgate attack. Virtually every day, there is insecurity incidences reported. These ranges from 453 road carnage on our roads, violent robberies, heist thefts among others. These are good pointers of how the 454 country is unsafe despite having significant number of police officers in Kenya. 455

⁴⁵⁶ 27 Recommendations and Conclusion a) Introduction

This study has studied a possible link between the ethical or unethical practice during recruitment of police officers in Kenya and the performance, or lack of it in regard to security of people in Kenya. The choice of this area of study was significant as it roots out the underlying problem that has been witnessed over years in Kenya during recruitments. Those exercises in Kenya are always prone to unethical practices. This study analyzed this link and concluded that the unethical practices have resulted to high level of insecurity in Kenya.

462 28 b) Conclusion

Ethics require individuals to uphold values that are set by various professions. Those in the police force are 463 required to adhere to certain terms of work, including not engaging in corruption. The vice is the evil of 464 everything good going bad, including insecurity in Kenya. It has been noted that the rot in the police force starts 465 at the recruitment stage, and therefore, to end it, it is upon all involved to uphold and redirect energy to fighting 466 467 insecurity c) Recommendations As has been studied, corruption is seen to stem right from the recruitment stage. 468 Corruption as a form of unethical practices should not be allowed to be initiated at the recruitment stage. As a way of ending the vice, it is recommended that relevant authorities make stringent measures to hold accountable 469 those who are seen to engage in corruption. Both the recruiting police officers and the individuals being recruited 470 should be charged with abuse of office and corruption. Any form of corruption is bad and should not be tolerated. 471 Year 2014 () 472

474 Secondly, it is prudent that the government of Kenya should design a good programme that would educate 475 aspiring police officers of how to uphold ethics during recruitment and after they are absorbed into the police 476 force. Such a programme could include holding seminars for all interested before they undergo the recruitment 477 exercise, and another one for the ones who have qualified to become police officers. Such a programme would 478 ensure that ethics are upheld everywhere, and it would be a way of ending corruption once and for all.
